Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA): If an employee is absent from work for more than 3 days due to illness or to care for a family member, the absence may qualify for FMLA. Employees should follow their unit's practice to request FMLA. The FML timekeeping code should be used in conjunction with the appropriate paid timekeeping code (e.g., SKF, SCK).

Faculty and staff who are covered by a collective bargaining agreement should consult their contract regarding eligibility for paid time off benefits.

¹Campus employees who exhaust available short-term sick will be paid out of their available vacation accrual. At the employee's request, excused time without pay may be used instead of vacation. Unpaid absence longer than fourteen consecutive calendar days will require use of the appropriate unpaid leave of absence.

²If an employee's absence from work to care for a seriously ill family member qualifies for FMLA, use of short-term sick and vacation prior to the start of an unpaid FMLA leave is at the discretion of the employee.
